THE LOST PRAYER

David Williams

Welcome to Your New Beginning

Congratulations.

You did it.

You made a decision that most people never make…

A decision to stop waiting for things to change…

A decision to stop hoping that "someday" your prayers will be answered…

And a decision to finally receive the blessings that have been waiting for you all along.

This is that moment.

The moment everything shifts.

The moment you stop settling for less than you deserve…

And start stepping into the abundant, blessed life that was always meant to be yours.

Because here's what I want you to understand…

You didn't find The Lost Prayer by accident.

Out of the billions of people on this planet…

Out of the millions searching for answers…

You are here, right now, reading these words.

That's not a coincidence.

That's divine timing.

Something inside you knew there was more…

Something inside you knew that your prayers were meant to be answered…

Something inside you refused to give up, even when nothing seemed to work.

And that something led you here.

To this guide. To this prayer. To this moment.

So take a deep breath…

And let it sink in…

You're exactly where you're supposed to be.

Now, let me tell you what you're holding in your hands.

This isn't just a guide.

This isn't just a set of instructions.

This is the key to a completely different life.

A life where you don't want for things anymore… because you have them.

A life where you don't hope for blessings… because they flow to you naturally.

A life where that constant worry in the back of your mind… that weight on your shoulders… that feeling that you're always one step behind…

Just… disappears.

Can you imagine what that feels like?

Waking up each morning with certainty instead of anxiety…

Moving through your day with confidence instead of doubt…

Knowing — truly knowing — that you are supported, protected, and guided…

That the abundance you need is already on its way…

That the healing you've prayed for is already happening…

That the love you've longed for is already surrounding you…

This is the life The Lost Prayer creates.

And it starts the moment you recite it for the first time.

But before we get there, I want to prepare you for what's ahead.

In this guide, you're going to discover things that may challenge what you've always believed about prayer.

You're going to learn why most prayers don't work… and why everything you've tried before left you waiting and wondering.

You're going to uncover the fascinating — and sometimes shocking — history of how this prayer was hidden from ordinary people for over 2,000 years… and why the most powerful figures in history kept it for themselves.

You're going to understand the simple but profound difference between praying for something… and praying from something.

And you're going to learn the three ancient Aramaic words that seal your prayer and lock your desires into reality… the same words spoken by Jesus and his followers.

By the time you finish this guide, you won't just understand The Lost Prayer…

You'll feel it.

You'll feel that wave of calm wash over you…

That deep peace settle into your bones…

That knowing — that unshakable knowing — that what you've asked for is already yours.

So here's what I want you to do.

Find a quiet place.

Give yourself the next 15-20 minutes without distraction.

Because what you're about to read has the power to change everything.

Not just your finances…

Not just your health…

Not just your relationships…

But the very way you experience life itself.

No more struggling…

No more striving…

No more wondering if you're worthy of blessings…

From this moment forward, you'll know the truth:

You were always worthy.

You were always meant to receive.

And now, you finally have the way.

Your blessed life begins on the very next page.

Let's go.

The History of The Lost Prayer

What if everything you were taught about prayer… was incomplete?

What if the most powerful form of prayer — the exact method used by Jesus and his followers — was deliberately hidden from you?

What if the reason your prayers haven't been answered… isn't because you're not worthy… isn't because you're not faithful enough… isn't because the divine isn't listening…

But simply because you were never given the real instructions?

That's the truth you're about to discover.

And once you see it, you can never unsee it.

The Healers of the Desert

Let's go back over 2,000 years.

In the harsh, sun-baked wilderness near the Dead Sea, there lived a mysterious group of Jewish mystics.

The ancient philosopher Philo called them the "Therapeutae" — which means "The Healers."

Today, we know them as the Essenes.

They numbered about 4,000. They lived in communities scattered throughout ancient Israel — some in towns and villages, others in isolated desert settlements.

And they were unlike any other religious group of their time.

While the Pharisees debated scripture in synagogues and the Sadducees performed rituals in the Temple…

The Essenes retreated to the wilderness to pursue something deeper.

They believed that all people are born equal — and they were the only group in the ancient world to condemn slavery as ungodly.

They held all possessions in common. They rejected personal wealth.

And they dedicated their lives to prayer, purification, and divine connection.

But here's what made them truly remarkable…

The Essenes didn't just pray. They understood how to pray.

Before sunrise each day, they would gather for what the historian Josephus described as "ancestral prayers" — practices so sacred that outsiders described them as "making supplication for the sun to rise."

Their communal meals were conducted in such profound silence and reverence that observers found them mysterious… almost otherworldly.

And their prayers weren't just words sent upward, hoping for a response…

The Essenes practiced a form of prayer that connected them directly to what they called the "celestial liturgy" — a joining of heaven and earth in the present moment.

They didn't pray for healing. They prayed as healers.

They didn't pray for abundance. They prayed from wholeness.

This was their secret.

And many scholars believe they passed this knowledge directly to Jesus himself.

The Language That Was Lost

Jesus and his disciples spoke a language called Aramaic.

This wasn't just any language…

Aramaic was the tongue of prophets, healers, and miracle workers. It was the language Jesus used when he healed the sick, when he taught his followers, and when he prayed.

But here's the problem most people never consider…

The Bible you read today has been through an incredible journey.

The original teachings were spoken in Aramaic…

Then written down in Aramaic and Greek…

Then translated to Latin…

Then translated to English…

And dozens of other languages along the way.

3,900 translations. 25,000 translators. All done by hand, over nearly 2,000 years.

Imagine playing a game of telephone with the most important message in history.

Some things were bound to get lost.

And the problem goes deeper than simple translation errors…

You see, Aramaic is what linguists call a "unified" language. In Aramaic, there's no hard separation between body, mind, and spirit. Between heaven and earth. Between the physical and the divine.

A single Aramaic word might have five or six different meanings — all of them true at once.

For example, the Aramaic word for "heaven" doesn't just mean a place you go when you die…

It also means the vibration of the Holy One shining throughout all activity and all potential — here and now, in this very moment.

But when translators converted these rich, multi-layered words into Greek and Latin and English…

They had to choose just one meaning.

And in doing so, entire dimensions of understanding were lost.

The instructions for prayer — the real instructions — were among the casualties.

Hidden for 2,000 Years

In 367 AD, something happened that would affect billions of lives for the next sixteen centuries.

Bishop Athanasius of Alexandria sent out his famous "Easter Letter" — officially condemning all non-canonical books and declaring which texts were acceptable for Christians to read.

Books that had been cherished by early Christians for generations were suddenly forbidden.

Monks who possessed these texts faced a terrible choice: destroy them, or hide them.

Many chose to hide them.

In the Egyptian desert, near a town called Nag Hammadi, a group of monks carefully wrapped dozens of ancient texts in leather bindings…

Placed them inside a large sealed jar…

And buried them at the base of a cliff.

There they would remain, untouched, for nearly 1,600 years.

Meanwhile, in the caves near the Dead Sea, another collection of sacred texts lay hidden…

Placed there by the Essenes themselves, possibly as Roman armies advanced during the Jewish revolt of 66-70 AD.

The Essenes knew these writings were too important to be destroyed.

So they sealed them in clay jars and hid them in caves carved into the desert cliffs.

And there they waited.

For nearly 2,000 years, the complete instructions for this ancient form of prayer remained buried in the earth…

While the rest of the world prayed with incomplete knowledge, wondering why their prayers weren't answered.

The Discoveries That Changed Everything

December 1945.

A young Egyptian farmer named Muhammed Ali was digging for fertilizer at the base of a cliff near Nag Hammadi in Upper Egypt.

His mattock struck something hard.

He unearthed a large clay jar — about two feet tall, sealed with a dark substance.

At first, he was afraid to break it open. What if there was a jinn inside?

But then he thought… what if there's gold?

He smashed the jar with his mattock.

Out tumbled twelve leather-bound books — ancient papyrus codices that had been sealed away since the 4th century.

His mother, not knowing what they were, used some of the loose pages as kindling for her oven.

But what remained would change our understanding of early Christianity forever.

Among the texts was the Gospel of Thomas — 114 sayings attributed to Jesus, recorded by Thomas the scribe who followed him and wrote down his exact words.

Not interpretations.

Not translations of translations.

The actual teachings, preserved for nearly two millennia.

Two years later, in 1947, the discoveries continued.

A young Bedouin shepherd named Muhammed ed-Dib was searching for a stray goat in the cliffs above the Dead Sea.

He threw a stone into a dark cave opening…

And heard the unmistakable sound of shattering pottery.

What he found inside would become known as the greatest archaeological discovery of the 20th century.

The Dead Sea Scrolls.

Hundreds of ancient manuscripts, including the oldest known copies of the Hebrew Bible — predating any previous discovery by nearly 1,000 years.

And among them, texts from the Essenes themselves…

Documents describing their way of life, their beliefs, their practices…

And their methods of prayer.

For the first time in nearly two millennia, scholars could read the original instructions.

They could see how Jesus and his followers actually prayed.

And what they discovered was startling.

What the Scholars Found

When Aramaic scholar Neil Douglas-Klotz began studying the original texts, he made a remarkable discovery.

One of Jesus's most famous teachings about prayer had been fundamentally changed in translation.

In the King James Bible, we read:

"Whatsoever ye ask the Father in my name, He will give it to you. Ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full."

Simple enough. Ask, and you'll receive.

But when Douglas-Klotz translated the original Aramaic from the ancient texts, he found something very different:

"All things that you ask straightly, directly, from inside my name, you will be given. Ask without hidden motive and be surrounded by your answer. Be enveloped by what you desire, that your gladness be full."

Do you see the difference?

"Be surrounded by your answer."

"Be enveloped by what you desire."

This isn't about asking and waiting.

This is about experiencing your answer now. Being surrounded by it. Enveloped by it.

The only way to be surrounded by something… is if it's already here.

This is the key that was lost in translation.

This is the method that was hidden for 2,000 years.

And this is what you're about to learn.

How The Lost Prayer Works

Now that you understand where The Lost Prayer comes from…

It's time to understand why it works.

And more importantly…

Why everything you've tried before didn't.

The Rain That Wouldn't Come

Let me tell you a story.

In the early 1990s, the American Southwest was suffering through one of the worst droughts in recorded history.

It had gone on for over five years.

Cattle were dying. Crops were failing. Farmers were selling their land because they could no longer make a living from it.

The elders of the native peoples said that in the memory of their ancestors, they had never seen a drought that lasted this long.

During this time, a researcher named Gregg Braden was living in northern New Mexico.

One morning, he received a call from a Native American friend — we'll call him David.

David asked if Gregg would accompany him to an ancient stone circle in the desert… a sacred place so old that no one knew who built it.

"The skin between the worlds is very thin there," David explained. "I'm going to offer a prayer for rain. Would you like to join me?"

Gregg didn't hesitate. He said yes.

When they arrived at the ancient site, Gregg expected to see some kind of ceremony.

Maybe chanting.

Maybe dancing.

Maybe elaborate rituals.

What he witnessed was something very different.

David removed his work boots and placed them outside the stone circle.

He stepped inside with his bare feet touching the earth.

He closed his eyes, placed his hands over his heart…

And stood in silence for just a few moments.

Then he opened his eyes and said, "I'm hungry. Want to get something to eat?"

Gregg was confused.

"I thought you were going to pray for rain," he said.

David looked at him and smiled.

What he said next changed Gregg's understanding of prayer forever:

"If I prayed for rain, rain could never happen."

The Truth About Asking

Think about what David said.

"If I prayed for rain, rain could never happen."

Why?

Because the moment you pray for something, you're telling the universe that it doesn't exist.

When you ask for healing… you're declaring "I am not healed."

When you ask for money… you're declaring "I don't have enough."

When you ask for love… you're declaring "I am alone."

When you ask for guidance… you're declaring "I am lost."

Every prayer of wanting is a statement of lack.

And here's the profound truth the Essenes understood…

The divine doesn't respond to lack.

The divine responds to wholeness.

This is why scripture says:

"Therefore I tell you, whatever you ask for in prayer, believe that you have received it, and it will be yours." — Mark 11:24

Not "believe that you will receive it."

Believe that you have received it.

Past tense.

Already done.

"And you are complete in Him…" — Colossians 2:10

Complete. Whole. Lacking nothing.

"Be perfect, therefore, as your heavenly Father is perfect…" — Matthew 5:48

The word "perfect" here doesn't mean flawless. In the original language, it means whole. Complete. Finished.

These verses have been hiding the secret in plain sight for 2,000 years.

The language of the divine is not lack, wanting, and hoping…

It's wholeness, completeness, and gratitude for what already is.

What David Actually Did

So if David didn't pray for rain… what did he do?

When Gregg asked him, David explained:

"When I closed my eyes, I felt the feeling of what it feels like when it rains in my pueblo village."

"I felt what it's like to stand with my bare feet in the mud — and the mud is there because there's been so much rain."

"I smelled what the rain smells like when it rolls off the adobe walls of our pueblo."

"I heard the sound of the rain falling."

"I felt what it would be like to walk through the corn stalks brushing against my chest — and they're that tall because there's been so much rain to grow them."

"And then I gave thanks. Gratitude and appreciation for the rain that has already happened."

Do you see what David did?

He didn't ask for rain.

He didn't hope for rain.

He didn't beg or plead or bargain.

He experienced the rain — with every sense — as if it had already happened.

He surrounded himself with his answer.

He was enveloped by what he desired.

And then he gave thanks for what was already done.

What Happened Next

Gregg and David drove an hour south to get lunch.

By the time Gregg got back to his land that afternoon, something began to happen that hadn't been seen in years.

Big black clouds rolled in over the mountains.

It started to rain.

And it rained.

And it rained.

It rained all that night. It rained the next morning. It rained the next afternoon.

It rained so much that the dry, cracked earth couldn't absorb the water. Fields flooded. Cattle got stranded. Roads washed out.

Gregg called David on the phone.

"David, this is a mess! What is happening?"

David was quiet for a moment.

Then he laughed and said:

"That's the part of the prayer our ancestors could never figure out. They could tell it to rain… but they couldn't tell it how much to rain."

The Language of the Divine

Here's what you need to understand:

The divine doesn't speak English.

If it did, people who speak other languages would be cut off from blessings.

The divine speaks in feeling.

In vibration.

In frequency.

Words are just tools we use to create feelings.

You can say a prayer in any language — English, Spanish, Aramaic, anything — and if you're speaking from a place of lack and wanting…

You'll get more lack and wanting.

But if you can create the feeling of already having what you desire…

If you can experience the reality of your answered prayer with all of your senses…

If you can surround yourself with your answer and give thanks for what is already done…

Then you're speaking the language the divine understands.

You're not sending a letter and hoping it arrives…

You're picking up the direct phone line to creation itself.

The Three Sacred Words

Jesus taught his disciples to seal every prayer with three specific Aramaic words.

These words close the prayer, send it to the divine, and lock it into reality.

They are:

1. L'alam
2. Al-mein
3. Amen

Each word carries profound meaning:

L'alam means "forever" or "to eternity." When you speak this word, you're declaring that what you've experienced in prayer is eternal — it exists beyond time, beyond circumstance, beyond any temporary appearance that might suggest otherwise.

Al-mein means "throughout all worlds" or "across all realms." This word acknowledges that your prayer isn't limited to your physical reality. It ripples across every dimension of existence. It touches the seen and the unseen.

Amen is perhaps the most misunderstood word in all of scripture. Most people think it simply means "so be it" or "the end." But in Aramaic, Amen is far more powerful. It means "I seal this in trust, in faith, and in truth." It's not a wish. It's not a hope. It's a declaration of certainty.

Together, these three words form the seal:

"Forever, throughout all worlds, I seal this in trust, faith, and truth."

When you speak these words at the end of your prayer…

After you've experienced your answer with all of your senses…

After you've surrounded yourself with the feeling of it already being done…

After you've given thanks for what is already yours…

You lock that experience into reality.

You're not asking anymore.

You're declaring.

You're sealing.

You're done.

The prayer is complete.

And the only thing left to do is receive.

Why This Changes Everything

Do you see now why your prayers might not have worked before?

It wasn't because you weren't faithful enough.

It wasn't because you didn't deserve blessings.

It wasn't because the divine wasn't listening.

You simply weren't given the complete instructions.

You were taught to ask and hope and wait…

When you should have been taught to feel and experience and receive.

You were told to pray for your healing…

When you should have been praying from your healing.

You were told to ask for abundance…

When you should have been surrounded by abundance before you ever opened your mouth.

This is the difference The Lost Prayer makes.

This is why it works when nothing else has.

And in the next section, you're going to learn exactly how to do it — step by step — so you can begin experiencing your answered prayers immediately.

The Step-by-Step Guide to The Lost Prayer

You now understand the history.

You understand why most prayers don't work.

You understand what makes The Lost Prayer different.

Now it's time to experience it for yourself.

What you're about to learn is simple.

It's not complicated.

It's not mysterious.

It doesn't require years of study or special abilities.

But don't mistake simple for weak.

The most powerful forces in the universe are often the simplest.

Gravity. Love. Breath.

The Lost Prayer works the same way.

Simple… and profoundly powerful.

Before You Begin

Find a quiet place where you won't be disturbed.

This doesn't have to be a church or a meditation room. It can be your bedroom, your backyard, your car parked somewhere peaceful.

What matters is that you feel safe and undistracted.

Turn off your phone. Close the door. Give yourself permission to be fully present for the next few minutes.

If you'd like, you can remove your shoes and place your bare feet on the ground — just as David did before his prayer for rain. There's something powerful about connecting directly to the earth.

But this isn't required. The Lost Prayer works wherever you are.

Take a few slow, deep breaths.

Let the tension leave your shoulders.

Let your jaw relax.

Let your mind quiet.

You're not trying to achieve anything right now.

You're simply arriving.

Arriving in this moment.

Arriving in your body.

Arriving in the presence of the divine.

When you feel settled… you're ready to begin.

Step 1: The Declaration

Every prayer begins with a declaration.

You're telling the divine — telling the field of all possibilities — what you're about to do.

Think of it like picking up the phone and saying who you're calling for.

This doesn't need to be elaborate. A single sentence is enough.

Simply state your intention clearly:

"This is a prayer of abundance and prosperity."

Or:

"This is a prayer of healing for my body."

Or:

"This is a prayer of love and connection."

Or:

"This is a prayer of guidance and clarity."

Say it out loud if you can. There's power in speaking your intention into existence.

If you're in a place where you can't speak aloud, say it firmly in your mind.

The key is clarity. Know what you're praying for before you begin.

Once you've made your declaration… move to Step 2.

Step 2: Enter the Feeling

This is the heart of The Lost Prayer.

This is where everything changes.

Close your eyes.

And begin to feel — with every fiber of your being — what it feels like when your prayer is already answered.

Not what it will feel like someday.

What it feels like right now.

If you're praying for abundance…

Feel what it feels like to check your bank account and see more than enough.

Feel the weight of your shoulders releasing because money is no longer a worry.

Feel the freedom of being able to say "yes" to the things you want — without hesitation, without guilt, without fear.

Feel what it's like to provide for your family with ease.

Feel the pride, the peace, the security.

Where do you feel it in your body? Your chest? Your belly? Your hands?

Let that feeling expand.

Let it fill you completely.

If you're praying for healing…

Feel what it feels like to wake up in a body that works perfectly.

Feel the energy flowing through you — vibrant, strong, alive.

Feel what it's like to move without pain, to breathe without effort, to live without limitation.

Feel the gratitude of looking in the mirror and seeing health looking back at you.

What does that feel like in your body right now?

Let that feeling become your reality in this moment.

If you're praying for love…

Feel what it feels like to be deeply, completely loved.

Feel the warmth of connection, of being seen, of being chosen.

Feel what it's like to wake up next to someone who adores you.

Or feel the love flowing through your family, your friendships, your community.

Feel the fullness in your heart. The sense of belonging. The peace of knowing you are not alone.

Let that feeling wrap around you like a warm blanket.

Step 3: Engage All Your Senses

Now deepen the experience.

Don't just feel the feeling — bring in all of your senses.

What do you see when your prayer is answered? What images come to mind? What does your life look like? What's in front of you?

What do you hear? Maybe it's laughter. Maybe it's words of love or congratulation. Maybe it's the sound of peace and quiet because the chaos is finally over.

What do you smell? Maybe it's a new home, a new car, fresh flowers, a home-cooked meal you can finally afford.

What do you taste? The celebration dinner. The champagne toast. The sweetness of success.

What do you touch? The keys to your new house. The hand of your beloved. Your own healthy body.

The more senses you engage, the more real this becomes.

You're not imagining a fantasy.

You're visiting your answered prayer.

You're living there, right now, in this moment.

Stay here as long as you need.

Let it become real.

Let it become the most real thing you've ever experienced.

Step 4: Give Thanks

While you're still surrounded by this feeling…

While you're still living inside your answered prayer…

Give thanks.

Not future thanks — "Thank you for what you're going to give me."

Present thanks — "Thank you for what already is."

"Thank you for this abundance that flows so easily into my life."

"Thank you for this healthy, vibrant body."

"Thank you for this love that surrounds me."

"Thank you for this guidance that makes my path so clear."

Speak your gratitude from the place of already having received.

Because in this moment, you have.

You're not hoping anymore.

You're not asking anymore.

You're thanking.

And gratitude is the most powerful signal you can send to the divine.

It says: "I have received. It is done."

Step 5: Seal the Prayer

Now it's time to close the prayer and lock it into reality.

Take a deep breath.

And speak the three sacred Aramaic words:

"L'alam" — Forever. Eternal. Beyond time. "Al-mein" — Throughout all worlds. Across all dimensions. "Amen" — I seal this in trust, faith, and truth.

Say them slowly. Say them with conviction.

"L'alam… Al-mein… Amen."

As you speak these words, feel the prayer being sealed.

Feel it locking into place.

Feel the certainty that what you've just experienced is not a wish — it's a done deal.

The prayer is complete.

The message has been sent.

The seal is unbreakable.

Step 6: Release and Receive

This final step is just as important as everything that came before.

Once you've sealed the prayer… Let it go.

Don't hold onto it.

Don't keep checking to see if it's working.

Don't replay it over and over, wondering if you did it right.

You did it right.

It is done.

Now your only job is to receive.

Go about your day. Live your life.

And stay open to the blessings that are already making their way to you.

They might come from expected places.

They might come from directions you never anticipated.

They might come through people, opportunities, or "coincidences" that seem almost too perfect to be random.

Don't question them.

Receive them.

This is your answered prayer showing up in physical form.

Welcome it. You've been waiting for this your whole life.

The Complete Prayer (Summary)

Here's the entire practice in brief:

1. Declaration — State your intention clearly. "This is a prayer of [abundance/healing/love/guidance]."
2. Enter the Feeling — Feel what it feels like when your prayer is already answered. Not someday — now.
3. Engage All Senses — See it, hear it, smell it, taste it, touch it. Make it real in every way.
4. Give Thanks — Express gratitude for what already is. Thank the divine for your answered prayer.
5. Seal the Prayer — Speak the three Aramaic words with conviction: "L'alam… Al-mein… Amen." (Forever… Throughout all worlds… Sealed in trust, faith, and truth.)
6. Release and Receive — Let go. Trust. Stay open to receiving your blessings.

How Often Should You Practice?

The Lost Prayer is most powerful when practiced consistently.

We recommend once per day — ideally in the morning before your day begins, or in the evening before sleep.

But here's the truth…

Even one sincere prayer, done correctly, can change everything.

It's not about quantity. It's about quality.

It's about how fully you can enter the feeling.

It's about how real you can make your answered prayer in that moment.

One prayer that moves you to tears is worth more than a hundred prayers recited by habit.

So don't worry about doing it perfectly.

Don't worry about doing it enough.

Just do it fully.

Do it with your whole heart.

And watch what happens.

How to Use the Guided Recordings

You now have everything you need to practice The Lost Prayer on your own.

Anytime. Anywhere.

But we wanted to give you something more.

Something that makes this even easier… Even more powerful… And even more transformative.

That's why we created the Guided Prayer Recordings.

What Are the Guided Recordings?

The Guided Recordings are audio experiences designed to walk you through The Lost Prayer — step by step, word by word, feeling by feeling.

You don't have to think.

You don't have to remember what comes next.

You simply close your eyes… press play… and let the recording guide you into the experience of your answered prayer.

It's like having a personal guide leading you through the prayer every single time.

Each recording has been carefully crafted to:

- Calm your mind — The recordings begin by helping you relax, release tension, and become fully present. This is essential, because a busy mind can't fully enter the feeling.
- Guide you into the feeling — You'll be led through vivid imagery and sensory experiences designed to help you feel your answered prayer as if it's already real. The words are chosen specifically to bypass your thinking mind and speak directly to your deeper self.
- Deepen the experience — The pacing, the tone, the music underneath — everything is designed to help you go deeper than you might on your own. Many people report that the guided recordings help them access feelings they didn't even know they were capable of.
- Seal the prayer — Each recording concludes with the three sacred Aramaic words, spoken at the perfect moment, locking your prayer into reality.

All you have to do is listen.

The Three Guided Recordings

You have access to three different recordings, each designed for a specific area of life:

The Prayer of Abundance and Prosperity

This recording guides you into the feeling of complete financial freedom.

You'll experience what it feels like to have more than enough… to never worry about money again… to provide for yourself and your loved ones with ease.

You'll feel the security, the freedom, the peace that comes from knowing you are always taken care of.

Use this recording when you want to call in wealth, opportunity, financial blessings, career success, or material abundance of any kind.

The Prayer of Healing and Perfect Health

This recording guides you into the feeling of a body that works perfectly.

You'll experience what it feels like to be vibrant, energetic, and fully alive… to move without pain… to wake up feeling strong and capable… to trust your body completely.

You'll feel the vitality flowing through every cell, the gratitude for health, the freedom of living without physical limitation.

Use this recording when you want to call in healing — whether physical, emotional, or energetic. It works for specific conditions and for general wellness.

The Prayer of Love and Connection

This recording guides you into the feeling of being deeply, completely loved.

You'll experience what it feels like to be in a relationship filled with warmth, intimacy, and genuine connection… or to feel the love flowing through your family, friendships, and community.

You'll feel the fullness in your heart, the peace of belonging, the joy of being truly seen and appreciated.

Use this recording when you want to call in romantic love, heal a relationship, deepen existing connections, or simply feel more loved in your daily life.

How to Use the Recordings

Using the Guided Recordings is simple:

1. Choose Your Focus Decide which area of life you want to focus on — abundance, healing, or love.

There's no wrong choice. Go with whatever feels most important to you right now.

You can use a different recording each day, or you can use the same one repeatedly until you feel a shift. Trust your intuition.

2. Find Your Space Just like with the self-guided practice, find a quiet place where you won't be disturbed.

The recordings work best when you can fully relax and let go. If possible, use headphones — they help create a more immersive experience and block out distractions.

3. Get Comfortable You can sit or lie down — whatever feels most natural.

If you tend to fall asleep easily, sitting might be better. But honestly, even if you drift off during the recording, the prayer is still working. Your subconscious mind is always listening.

4. Press Play and Let Go This is the most important part.

Don't try to control the experience. Don't analyze what's happening. Don't judge whether you're "doing it right."

Just listen. Follow along. Let the words wash over you. Let the recording do the work. Your only job is to feel.

5. Stay Present Afterward When the recording ends, don't jump up immediately.

Take a few moments to stay with the feeling. Let it settle into your body. Let it become part of you.

Then, when you're ready, open your eyes and return to your day — carrying that feeling with you.

When to Use the Guided Recordings vs. Self-Guided Practice

Both approaches work. Both are powerful. Here's how to think about it:

Use the Guided Recordings when:

- You're new to The Lost Prayer and want support as you learn

- You're tired, stressed, or your mind is especially busy
- You want to go deeper than you can on your own
- You want a more immersive, effortless experience
- You simply prefer being guided

Use the Self-Guided Practice when:

- You want to personalize the prayer for a specific situation
- You're in a place where you can't play audio
- You feel confident in the practice and want more flexibility
- You want to pray for something that doesn't fit neatly into abundance, healing, or love
- You want to connect with the prayer in your own words

Many people use both — guided recordings on some days, self-guided practice on others.

There's no right or wrong way. The best approach is the one you'll actually do.

The Power of Repetition

Here's something important to understand…

The more you use the recordings, the more powerful they become.

Not because the recordings change. But because you change.

Each time you listen, you train your mind and body to enter the feeling more quickly… more deeply… more completely.

The pathways get stronger. The feeling becomes more familiar.

And eventually, you'll find that you can access the state of "answered prayer" almost instantly — even without the recording.

This is the goal.

The recordings are training wheels for your consciousness.

They're teaching you how to feel.

And once you learn, that ability is yours forever.

Tips for Getting the Most from Your Recordings

- Listen daily, if possible. Consistency creates momentum. Even five minutes a day is better than an hour once a week.
- Listen at the same time each day. Morning and evening are especially powerful — morning sets the tone for your day, evening plants seeds in your subconscious while you sleep.
- Don't force it. Some days, the feeling will come easily. Other days, it might feel harder. Both are okay. Just show up and let the recording do its work.
- Trust the process. You might not feel dramatic shifts immediately. That's normal. The prayer is working whether you feel it or not. Stay consistent, and the results will come.
- Keep a journal. After each session, jot down anything you noticed — feelings, images, insights, or even just how you feel. Over time, you'll see patterns emerge. And you'll have a record of your transformation.

A Note on the Music

You'll notice that each recording includes gentle background music.

This isn't just for ambiance.

Music has a profound effect on consciousness. It helps quiet the analytical mind and opens the door to deeper feeling.

The music in these recordings has been chosen specifically to support the prayer experience — to help you relax, go deeper, and stay present.

Let it carry you.

Use Cases — The Many Ways to Use The Lost Prayer

The Lost Prayer isn't just for "big" things.

It's not reserved for emergencies or desperate moments.

It's a way of living.

A way of moving through the world in constant connection with the divine.

Once you understand the structure — declare, feel, sense, thank, seal, release — you can apply it to virtually anything.

Big dreams. Small desires. Urgent needs. Quiet hopes.

The structure stays the same. Only the feeling changes.

In this section, we'll explore the many ways you can use The Lost Prayer in your daily life. Consider this your inspiration — a glimpse of what's possible when you have a direct line to the divine.

Financial & Career

Calling in a Specific Amount of Money Maybe you need $5,000 for an unexpected expense. Maybe you want to hit a specific income goal this month. Maybe you're saving for something meaningful.

The Lost Prayer works beautifully for specific amounts.

Declare your intention: "This is a prayer of financial abundance."

Then feel what it feels like to have that money. Not to need it. To have it. Feel the relief. The freedom. The gratitude. See the number in your bank account. Feel what it's like to pay that bill, make that purchase, reach that goal — with ease.

Seal it. Release it. And stay open to how it arrives.

Before a Job Interview The morning of your interview, take five minutes for The Lost Prayer.

Don't pray for the job. Pray from already having it.

Feel what it feels like to get the call telling you you've been hired. Feel the excitement, the pride, the relief. Hear the words of congratulation. Feel yourself walking into your new office on day one.

When you show up for the interview, you'll carry that energy with you. Confidence. Certainty. The feeling of someone who already belongs there.

Launching a Business or Project Feel what it feels like when the launch is a massive success.

See the sales coming in. Hear the notifications. Read the messages from happy customers. Feel the pride of having created something that matters.

Don't pray for success. Pray from success.

Getting Out of Debt This is a powerful one.

Feel what it feels like to be completely debt-free. Not "almost there." Completely free.

Feel the lightness in your chest. The peace of knowing you owe nothing to anyone. The freedom of keeping what you earn.

See yourself making that final payment. Feel the tears of relief. Hear yourself saying, "It's done. I'm free."

Health & Healing

Healing a Specific Condition Whether it's chronic pain, a diagnosis, or something that's bothered you for years…

Don't pray for healing. Pray from being healed.

Feel what your body feels like when this condition no longer exists. Feel the ease. The freedom. The vitality.

What can you do now that you couldn't do before? Feel yourself doing it. Running. Playing with your kids. Waking up without pain. Moving through your day with energy.

Experience the healed version of yourself — fully, completely, with all your senses.

Before a Medical Appointment or Procedure The night before, or the morning of, practice The Lost Prayer.

Feel what it feels like to receive good news. Feel the relief washing over you as the doctor tells you everything looks great. Feel yourself walking out of that office with a smile on your face.

Or if you're having a procedure, feel what it feels like when it's over and successful. Feel yourself recovering quickly, easily, completely.

Mental and Emotional Healing The Lost Prayer works for more than physical conditions.

Anxiety. Depression. Grief. Trauma. Old wounds that haven't healed.

Feel what it feels like to be free of this weight. Feel the peace that comes from release. Feel the lightness. The clarity. The joy that's possible when you're no longer carrying this burden.

You're not denying your current experience. You're visiting the version of yourself who has moved through it — and inviting that reality into the present.

Healing for Someone Else Yes, you can pray for others.

Hold them in your heart. See them in your mind.

And feel what it feels like when they are healed. See them healthy, vibrant, alive. Hear their laughter. Feel the joy of being with them when they're whole.

You're not trying to force anything on them. You're simply holding the highest possibility for them — and offering that to the divine.

Love & Relationships

Calling in a Romantic Partner This is one of the most powerful uses of The Lost Prayer.

Don't pray for a partner. Pray from already being in the relationship.

Feel what it feels like to be loved completely. Feel the warmth of waking up next to someone who adores you. Hear the words of love. Feel the comfort of partnership.

Don't get too specific about who — you might limit what the divine wants to bring you. Focus on the feeling of the relationship you desire.

Healing a Damaged Relationship Maybe there's been conflict. Distance. Words that can't be unsaid.

Feel what it feels like when the relationship is healed. Feel the warmth between you again. Hear the conversation where understanding finally happens. Feel the relief of forgiveness — given and received.

See yourself together, at peace, connected.

Deepening an Existing Relationship Not all relationship prayers are about fixing something broken.

Maybe you simply want more intimacy. More connection. More joy with your partner, your children, your friends.

Feel what that deeper connection feels like. Feel the laughter, the conversations, the moments of closeness that take your breath away.

Releasing a Relationship with Love Sometimes the highest outcome isn't reconciliation. Sometimes it's peaceful release.

If you know a relationship needs to end — or has ended painfully — you can use The Lost Prayer to find peace.

Feel what it feels like when you're completely at peace with this ending. No anger. No resentment. Just acceptance, gratitude for what was, and openness to what's next.

Life Transitions & Decisions

Making a Major Decision Should I take this job? Should I move? Should I end this relationship? Should I start this business?

When you're stuck in indecision, The Lost Prayer can bring clarity.

Don't pray for the answer. Pray from having the answer.

Feel what it feels like to have complete clarity. Feel the peace of knowing exactly what to do. Feel the confidence of moving forward without doubt.

Often, the answer will arise during the prayer itself — or shortly after.

Before a Big Move Moving to a new city, a new home, a new chapter of life…

Feel what it feels like to be settled and happy in your new place. See your belongings arranged perfectly. Feel the sense of home. Hear the sounds of your new neighborhood. Feel the excitement of fresh beginnings.

Starting a New Chapter New job. New school. New phase of life.

Feel what it feels like when you've successfully transitioned. When the "new" has become comfortable. When you look back and realize it was one of the best decisions you ever made.

Daily Life & "Small" Things

Here's something important… The Lost Prayer isn't just for big, dramatic requests. You can use it for everyday situations too.

And honestly? Practicing on small things is one of the best ways to build your faith — because you'll see results quickly.

Finding a Parking Spot Before you arrive, feel what it feels like to pull directly into the perfect spot. Feel the satisfaction. The ease. The little wink from the universe.

Silly? Maybe. But it works. And every small win builds your belief in the process.

A Smooth Commute Feel what it feels like to arrive on time, relaxed, without stress. See the traffic parting. Feel the ease of the journey.

A Productive Day In the morning, feel what it feels like at the end of a day where everything flowed. Where you accomplished what mattered. Where you're going to bed satisfied.

A Peaceful Interaction Before a conversation you're nervous about — a difficult discussion with a family member, a meeting with your boss, a confrontation you've been avoiding…

Feel what it feels like when it goes better than expected. Feel the understanding between you. Hear the words flowing easily. Feel the resolution.

Goals & Dreams

Athletic or Physical Performance Before a race, a game, a competition, a workout…

Feel what it feels like to perform at your absolute best. Feel your body moving perfectly. Feel the strength, the speed, the precision. See yourself crossing the finish line. Hear the cheers.

Athletes have used visualization for decades. The Lost Prayer takes it deeper — because you're not just seeing it, you're feeling it and sealing it with the divine.

Creative Projects Writing a book. Recording an album. Launching a product. Creating art.

Feel what it feels like when it's done — and it's everything you hoped for. Feel the pride of completion. See people responding to your work. Hear the praise. Feel the impact you've made.

Long-Term Dreams That thing you've wanted for years but have been afraid to really go for…

The Lost Prayer is how you start calling it in.

Feel what it feels like when it's finally real. When you're living the dream, not just dreaming it.

You don't need to know how it will happen. You just need to feel that it already has.

Protection & Safety

Before Travel Feel what it feels like to arrive safely, easily, without incident. Feel the smooth journey. See yourself at your destination, happy and whole.

For Your Loved Ones You can pray for the protection of your children, your partner, your family.

Feel what it feels like knowing they are completely safe. Feel the peace of that certainty. See them protected, guided, surrounded by light.

In Uncertain Times When the world feels chaotic… when you're not sure what's coming…

Feel what it feels like to be completely at peace regardless of external circumstances. Feel the unshakeable knowing that you are divinely guided and protected.

That feeling is available to you right now.

The Invitation

This list could go on forever.

Because The Lost Prayer applies to everything.

Every desire. Every challenge. Every dream. Every fear.

The structure never changes: Declare. Feel. Sense. Thank. Seal. Release.

Only the content changes.

So here's my invitation to you…

Don't limit yourself to the "big" prayers.

Don't save The Lost Prayer for emergencies.

Use it for everything.

Use it for parking spots and promotions. Use it for healing and happiness. Use it for love and for lunch reservations.

The more you use it, the more natural it becomes.

The more natural it becomes, the more powerful it becomes.

And eventually, you'll find that you're no longer just saying prayers…

You're living in prayer.

Every moment. Every breath. Every step.

Connected to the divine. Surrounded by your answered prayers. Exactly as it was always meant to be.

The Lost Prayer Success Stories

The Lost Prayer has already changed thousands of lives.

Every day, we receive messages from men and women who are experiencing things they never thought possible.

Unexpected checks in the mail. Health conditions that doctors can't explain. Relationships restored after years of distance. Opportunities appearing out of nowhere.

These aren't coincidences. These are answered prayers.

And soon, you'll have your own story to tell.

Here are just a few examples of what's possible when you pray from your answer instead of for it…

Rebecca M. — Houston, Texas — "My business tripled in four months."

I've been running a small online business for three years. It paid the bills — barely — but I was stuck. No matter what I tried, I couldn't seem to break through to the next level.

I started using The Lost Prayer every morning before I checked my emails or looked at sales numbers.

I would close my eyes and feel what it felt like to have a thriving business. I saw myself looking at my revenue dashboard and feeling proud instead of stressed. I felt the security of having more than enough. I felt like a successful business owner — not someone just barely getting by.

Within the first two weeks, I landed a wholesale account I'd been chasing for months. They just emailed me out of the blue and said yes.

Then a podcast invited me to be a guest. Then one of my products went viral on social media — I still don't know exactly how it happened.

Four months later, my revenue had tripled. Tripled.

I'm not doing anything dramatically different in my business. I'm just different. And everything around me is responding to that.

James T. — Portland, Oregon — "The doctors couldn't explain it."

I was diagnosed with severe inflammation in my joints about two years ago. Some days I could barely get out of bed. The pain was constant. I tried medications, physical therapy, diet changes — nothing really worked.

When I found The Lost Prayer, I was skeptical. I'm not really a "spiritual" person. But I was desperate enough to try anything.

Every night before bed, I would do the prayer for healing. I would feel what it felt like to wake up without pain. I imagined myself moving freely — hiking, playing with my dog, just walking without wincing.

The first week, I didn't notice much. But I kept going.

By the third week, I realized I had gone two full days without reaching for my pain medication. That had never happened.

By week six, I went back to my doctor for a follow-up. He ran the tests again and just stared at the results. The inflammation markers had dropped dramatically. He asked me what I was doing differently.

I didn't know how to explain it to him. So I just said I'd been praying.

I still do The Lost Prayer every night. Not because I need healing anymore — but because I never want to forget what brought it to me.

Maria S. — Chicago, Illinois — "I met my husband three weeks after starting the love prayer."

I had been single for almost five years. Five years of bad dates, disappointments, and starting to believe that maybe love just wasn't in the cards for me.

I used the guided recording for love every morning. I would lie in bed with my headphones on and let the prayer wash over me.

I didn't try to picture a specific person. I just felt what it would feel like to be loved. Really loved. To have someone who saw me, appreciated me, chose me every single day.

By the end of each recording, I would be in tears — not sad tears, but the kind of tears you cry when something beautiful touches your soul.

About three weeks in, I went to a friend's birthday dinner. I almost didn't go — I was tired and didn't feel like being social.

But something told me to show up.

That's where I met Daniel. He was a friend of a friend. We talked all night. By the end of the evening, I felt like I'd known him my whole life.

We've been married for two years now. And I know — I know — that The Lost Prayer brought him to me. Or maybe it brought me to him. Either way, I'm grateful every single day.

Thomas K. — Denver, Colorado — "I paid off $47,000 in debt in eleven months."

I was drowning in debt. Credit cards, a car loan, medical bills from a surgery a few years back. Every month I'd pay the minimums and watch the balances barely budge.

It felt hopeless. Like I'd be trapped forever.

I started doing The Lost Prayer for abundance, but I didn't focus on making more money. I focused on what it would feel like to be debt-free.

I would imagine logging into my accounts and seeing zeros. I would feel the lightness in my chest. The freedom. I would picture myself cutting up my credit cards because I didn't need them anymore.

What happened over the next year was almost unbelievable.

First, I got an unexpected raise at work — the first one in three years. Then I received a settlement check from an old class action lawsuit I had completely forgotten about. Then my parents told me they wanted to help me pay down some of my medical debt as an early inheritance gift.

Then I found a side gig that brought in an extra $800 a month.

None of these things were "miracles" in the supernatural sense. But the way they all lined up, one after another, exactly when I needed them? That was the miracle.

Eleven months after I started The Lost Prayer, I made my final debt payment. I remember sitting in my car afterward and crying like a baby.

I was free.

Sandra L. — Atlanta, Georgia — "My sister and I spoke for the first time in six years."

My sister and I had a falling out over something that seems so stupid now. A misunderstanding that turned into harsh words that turned into silence.

Six years of silence.

I missed her every day. But I was too proud to reach out. And I assumed she wanted nothing to do with me.

I started using The Lost Prayer — not to force reconciliation, but to feel at peace with the situation. I would imagine us sitting together, laughing like we used to. I would feel the warmth of having my sister back in my life.

I didn't expect anything to happen. I was just trying to heal my own heart.

About a month into the practice, I got a text message. From her. Out of nowhere.

It just said: "I've been thinking about you. I miss you. Can we talk?"

I called her immediately. We both cried. We both apologized. We both admitted we'd been wanting to reach out but didn't know how.

We talk every week now. It's like we never lost those six years.

The Lost Prayer didn't just answer my prayer — it answered hers too.

Michael R. — Phoenix, Arizona — "I found my dream job without even applying."

I had been job hunting for eight months. Sending out resumes, going to interviews, getting rejected or ghosted over and over.

It was destroying my confidence. I started to feel like maybe I just wasn't good enough.

A friend told me about The Lost Prayer. I was skeptical but figured I had nothing to lose.

Every day, I would feel what it felt like to have my dream job. I didn't focus on a specific company or position. I focused on the feeling — the satisfaction of doing meaningful work, the security of a good salary, the pride of being valued.

I would see myself walking into an office where I belonged. Hear my colleagues greeting me. Feel the sense of purpose.

About five weeks into the practice, I got a LinkedIn message from a recruiter. A company I had never heard of was looking for someone with my exact background. They found me through a connection of a connection.

I didn't apply. They came to me.

The interview process was smooth — almost effortless. They offered me the position a week later. Better title, better salary, better culture than anything I had been applying for.

I've been there eight months now. It's exactly what I was praying for — even better, actually.

Patricia D. — Nashville, Tennessee — "The anxiety that controlled my life just... lifted."

I've struggled with anxiety for as long as I can remember. Racing thoughts, tight chest, that constant feeling that something bad was about to happen.

I've tried therapy, medication, meditation apps — all of it helped a little, but the anxiety was always there underneath, waiting.

I started using The Lost Prayer for healing, but I focused specifically on emotional healing. On peace.

Every day, I would feel what it felt like to be calm. Actually calm. Not just managing anxiety, but free from it.

I would imagine waking up and feeling peaceful. Moving through my day without that knot in my stomach. Going to bed without racing thoughts keeping me awake.

It took about six weeks before I noticed something strange.

I was driving to work, and I realized... I felt fine. Not anxious. Not worried about everything that could go wrong. Just... fine.

At first, I thought it was a fluke. But that feeling kept coming back. More and more often, until it became my normal state.

I still have anxious moments sometimes. I'm human. But that constant, crushing weight? It's gone.

I feel like I have my life back.

David and Jennifer W. — San Diego, California — "We saved our marriage."

After fifteen years of marriage, my wife and I were on the verge of divorce.

We weren't fighting constantly or anything dramatic. We had just... drifted apart. We were roommates, not partners. The love that used to be there had faded into something flat and empty.

We both knew we were unhappy, but neither of us knew how to fix it.

I started using The Lost Prayer without telling Jennifer at first. Every day, I would feel what it felt like to have a loving, connected marriage. I would feel the warmth between us. The laughter. The intimacy — not just physical, but emotional.

I would see us holding hands again. Talking for hours like we used to. Looking at each other the way we did when we first fell in love.

Within a couple of weeks, things started shifting.

I found myself being more patient with her. More present. More appreciative of the small things.

And she noticed. She started responding differently too. Softer. More open.

One night, we ended up talking until 2 AM — about us, about our dreams, about what had gone wrong and what we both still wanted.

It was the first real conversation we'd had in years.

That was eight months ago. Our marriage isn't perfect — no marriage is — but it's alive again. The love is back.

We both use The Lost Prayer now. Together, sometimes.

Your Story Is Next

These are real people.

Real lives that changed.

Real prayers that were answered.

Some saw results in days. Others in weeks or months. Some experienced dramatic breakthroughs. Others experienced quiet, steady transformation.

The timing and form of your blessings may look different from theirs.

But make no mistake…

Your story is coming.

The moment you began reading this guide, something shifted.

The moment you recite The Lost Prayer for the first time, that shift accelerates.

And soon — maybe sooner than you think — you'll be the one sending us a message.

Telling us how everything changed.

We can't wait to hear it.

Frequently Asked Questions

You might have some questions.

That's natural.

Especially when you're learning something that challenges what you've always been taught about prayer.

Here are the questions we hear most often — along with answers that will help you get the most from The Lost Prayer.

How long until I see results?

This is the question everyone wants answered.

And the honest answer is: it depends.

Some people experience shifts within hours or days. A phone call out of nowhere. An unexpected check. A sudden feeling of peace they haven't felt in years.

Others experience a more gradual transformation over weeks or months. The changes are real, but they unfold slowly — like watching a flower bloom.

Based on the experiences of thousands of people who have used The Lost Prayer, most see significant changes within 63 days of consistent practice.

But here's what's important to understand…

The feeling happens immediately.

From the very first time you practice The Lost Prayer correctly, you'll feel something shift inside you. That wave of peace. That sense of certainty. That knowing that something is different.

The external results follow the internal shift. Sometimes quickly, sometimes gradually.

Your job isn't to worry about timing. Your job is to keep entering the feeling, keep sealing the prayer, and stay open to receive.

The blessings will come. Trust the process.

What if I don't feel anything?

First, don't panic. This is more common than you think, especially in the beginning.

We've spent our whole lives in our heads — thinking, analyzing, planning. Dropping into pure feeling can take practice.

Here are a few things to try:

- Start smaller. Instead of trying to feel "complete financial abundance," feel what it's like to receive an unexpected $100. Make it believable to your nervous system.
- Use the guided recordings. They're specifically designed to help you access the feeling state. Let the words and music carry you there.
- Focus on gratitude first. Sometimes the easiest doorway into feeling is thankfulness. Think of something you're already grateful for — feel that warmth — then expand it into your prayer.
- Be patient with yourself. You're learning a new skill. It's like going to the gym for the first time — you don't lift the heaviest weight on day one. The feeling muscle gets stronger with practice.

And remember: even if you don't feel a dramatic emotional shift, the prayer is still working. Your intention has been declared. The seal has been spoken. Trust that the divine heard you, even if your conscious mind is still catching up.

What if I can't visualize?

Good news — The Lost Prayer doesn't require vivid visualization.

Some people see clear mental images like a movie. Others see nothing at all. Both can be equally effective.

The key isn't seeing — it's feeling.

If you can't see images in your mind, focus entirely on the physical sensations and emotions.

What does relief feel like in your body? Where do you feel joy? What does peace feel like in your chest, your shoulders, your belly?

You can also focus on the other senses. What would you hear when your prayer is answered? What might you smell or taste or touch?

Visualization is just one doorway into the feeling. If that door is closed for you, use another one.

The feeling is what matters. However you get there is perfect.

Do I need to believe in God for this to work?

The Lost Prayer works with whatever you believe.

If you believe in God, pray to God.

If you believe in the Universe, Source, Spirit, the Divine, Higher Power — use whatever language resonates with you.

If you're not sure what you believe, that's okay too.

Here's the truth: The Lost Prayer is about connecting with something greater than your individual self. Something that responds to feeling, intention, and faith.

You don't need to have perfect theology.

You don't need to belong to a specific religion.

You don't need to have it all figured out.

You just need to be open. To feel. To trust that there's more to reality than what your five senses can perceive.

That's enough. That's always been enough.

Is this compatible with my religion?

Yes.

The Lost Prayer doesn't conflict with Christianity, Judaism, Islam, Buddhism, Hinduism, or any other faith tradition.

In fact, it comes from one of these traditions — the original teachings of Jesus, preserved in Aramaic.

What we're sharing isn't a new religion or a replacement for your existing beliefs. It's a method — a way of praying that can deepen and enhance whatever spiritual practice you already have.

Think of it like learning a more effective way to communicate. You're still talking to the same God, the same Source, the same Divine presence you've always prayed to.

You're just speaking in a language that gets heard more clearly.

Many people find that The Lost Prayer actually strengthens their existing faith — because they finally experience the answered prayers their tradition has always promised.

Can I pray for multiple things at once?

You can, but we recommend focusing on one intention per prayer session.

Here's why:

The power of The Lost Prayer comes from the depth of your feeling. And it's hard to go deep when you're spreading your attention across multiple outcomes.

Think of it like sunlight through a magnifying glass. Scattered light has little effect. Focused light can start a fire.

If you have multiple desires — say, abundance, healing, and love — we recommend doing separate prayer sessions for each one.

You might focus on abundance in the morning and healing in the evening.

Or you might dedicate different days to different intentions.

Find what works for you. The key is that when you're praying for something, you're fully praying for that thing — not halfway thinking about three other things.

What if my prayer doesn't come true?

Let's address this directly, because it's a fear that can undermine the entire process.

First: The Lost Prayer works. It has worked for thousands of people, and it can work for you.

But sometimes the results look different than we expected.

You might pray for a specific job and not get it — then land an even better opportunity you didn't know existed.

You might pray for a relationship to be healed and instead find the peace to let it go — which turns out to be the real healing you needed.

You might pray for something and discover, through the process, that you actually wanted something else entirely.

The divine sees further than we do. Sometimes the answer to our prayer is "yes." Sometimes it's "not yet." And sometimes it's "I have something better for you."

What The Lost Prayer does is align you with your highest good. And your highest good might be bigger than the specific thing you asked for.

So if something doesn't manifest the way you expected, don't lose faith. Ask yourself: What did show up? What shifted? What unexpected blessings appeared?

Often, when we look closely, we realize our prayer was answered — just not in the package we anticipated.

Stay open. Stay trusting. The divine knows what it's doing.

How often should I practice?

For best results, we recommend practicing The Lost Prayer at least once daily.

Consistency matters more than duration. Five minutes every day is more powerful than an hour once a week.

The ideal times are:

- Morning — before you check your phone, before you start your day. This sets the tone for everything that follows.
- Evening — before sleep. Your subconscious mind is most receptive during sleep, so the feeling you enter the night with continues working while you rest.

If you can do both morning and evening, even better.

But here's the real answer: practice as often as feels right to you.

Some people do The Lost Prayer multiple times throughout the day — a quick prayer before a meeting, during a lunch break, whenever they feel called.

Others keep it to one sacred session daily.

There's no wrong way. The best practice is the one you'll actually do.

Can I pray for other people?

Absolutely.

In fact, praying for others is one of the most beautiful uses of The Lost Prayer.

To pray for someone else, simply hold them in your heart and feel what it feels like when they receive their blessing.

See them healthy and vibrant. See them happy and at peace. See them thriving, succeeding, surrounded by love.

Feel the joy of witnessing their transformation. Feel the gratitude for their blessing.

Then seal the prayer as usual.

You're not imposing your will on them. You're simply holding the highest vision for their life and offering it to the divine.

Some of the most powerful prayers we've heard about involve parents praying for children, spouses praying for each other, and friends praying for friends.

Your love for them amplifies the prayer. Use it.

What if I miss a day?

Don't worry about it. Just start again the next day.

The Lost Prayer isn't about perfection. It's about practice.

Missing a day doesn't reset your progress or cancel your previous prayers. The blessings that have been set in motion are still in motion.

What you want to avoid is letting one missed day turn into a week, then a month, then forgetting about it entirely.

If you miss a day, simply notice it without judgment and return to the practice as soon as you can.

Consistency over time is what creates transformation. One missed day here or there won't stop your blessings from arriving.

Can I pray with my eyes open?

Yes, though most people find it easier to enter the feeling state with eyes closed.

Closing your eyes reduces external distractions and helps you turn your attention inward.

But if you're in a situation where you can't close your eyes — or if you simply prefer keeping them open — the prayer will still work.

What matters is your ability to feel the feeling. If you can do that with your eyes open, go for it.

Should I pray out loud or silently?

Either works.

Some people find that speaking the words out loud — especially the declaration and the Aramaic seal — adds power and weight to the prayer. There's something about hearing your own voice declare your intention that makes it feel more real.

Others prefer the intimacy of silent prayer, conducted entirely within.

Experiment with both and see what resonates.

You might find that you prefer out loud when you're alone and silent when you're in public or around others.

The divine hears both equally. Choose whatever helps you enter the feeling most fully.

What if I fall asleep during the guided recording?

That's perfectly fine.

Your subconscious mind is always listening, even when your conscious mind has drifted off.

In fact, falling asleep during a prayer can be a sign that you've truly relaxed and let go — which is exactly the state we're aiming for.

Many people report that they had their most powerful experiences on nights when they fell asleep during the recording and woke up feeling different.

So don't fight it. If sleep comes, let it come. The prayer is still working.

Can I modify the prayer or make it my own?

Absolutely.

The structure we've given you — declare, feel, sense, thank, seal — is a framework, not a rigid formula.

Once you understand the principles, you can adapt the prayer to fit your own style, your own words, your own spiritual language.

The key elements to keep are:

1. Praying from your answer, not for it.
2. Engaging the feeling with all your senses.
3. Giving thanks as if it's already done.
4. Sealing with the Aramaic words (or words of similar power and intention in your own tradition).

Beyond that, make it yours. The most powerful prayers are the ones that feel authentic to you.

I'm still skeptical. Can this really work?

Skepticism is natural. We're taught to doubt things we can't immediately see or measure.

But consider this:

You've probably tried the "normal" way of praying — asking and hoping and waiting. How well has that worked for you?

The Lost Prayer offers something different. A method that's been hidden for 2,000 years. A method used by some of the most powerful and blessed figures in history.

You don't have to believe it completely to try it.

You just have to be willing to practice it — sincerely, consistently — and observe what happens.

The evidence will come through your own experience. Through the shifts you feel. Through the blessings that begin to arrive.

Don't take our word for it. Test it for yourself. What do you have to lose?

Your Blessed Life Begins Now

You made it.

You now know what most people will never know.

You understand the history — how this prayer was practiced by Jesus and his followers, hidden for 2,000 years, and finally rediscovered in the caves near the Dead Sea.

You understand why most prayers don't work — how asking for something declares its absence, and how the divine responds to wholeness, not lack.

You understand the method — how to pray from your answer instead of for it, how to engage all your senses, how to give thanks for what already is.

You know the three sacred Aramaic words that seal your prayer and lock it into reality.

You have the guided recordings to carry you deeper than you could go alone.

You've seen what's possible through the stories of others who walked this path before you.

And you have answers to the questions that might have held you back.

In other words…

You have everything you need.

Everything. The only thing left is to begin.

And here's what I want you to understand as you take that first step…

This isn't just about getting things.

Yes, abundance will flow. Health will improve. Love will find you. Opportunities will appear.

But The Lost Prayer offers something far greater than material blessings.

It offers you a different way of being in the world.

A way of living where you're no longer separate from the divine — hoping, wishing, waiting for scraps of favor.

A way of living where you're connected. Plugged in. In constant communication with the source of all creation.

A way of living where peace isn't something you chase — it's something you carry.

Where certainty isn't something you hope for — it's something you wake up with.

Where blessings aren't random — they're natural, expected, normal.

This is what's available to you now.

Not someday. Now.

I want you to imagine something for me.

Imagine yourself six months from now.

You've been practicing The Lost Prayer every day — sometimes with the recordings, sometimes on your own.

And your life looks different.

Not just in the external things — though those have changed too.

You look different. You carry yourself differently. There's a light in your eyes that wasn't there before.

The worry that used to live in your chest? Gone.

The scarcity that used to run your decisions? Dissolved.

The doubt that used to whisper that you weren't worthy, weren't enough, weren't going to make it?

Silent.

In its place, there's something new.

A quiet confidence. A deep knowing. A trust in life that you've never felt before.

People notice. They ask what changed. They want what you have.

And you smile, because you remember when you were where they are now.

Searching. Hoping. Not knowing that the answer was so close.

That's where you're headed. That's who you're becoming. And it all starts today.

So here's what I want you to do.

Put down this guide.

Find a quiet place — even if it's just for five minutes.

And practice The Lost Prayer for the first time.

Choose one thing. One desire. One blessing you're ready to receive.

Declare it.

Feel it — as if it's already done.

Engage all your senses.

Give thanks.

And seal it with those three sacred words:

L'alam… Al-mein… Amen. Forever. Throughout all worlds. Sealed in trust, faith, and truth.

Then let it go. And watch what happens.

Your old life is behind you now.

The life of wanting. The life of hoping. The life of wondering why everyone else seemed blessed while you were left waiting.

That's over.

You've stepped through a door that can never be closed.

You've received knowledge that can never be taken from you.

And you've joined a lineage that stretches back 2,000 years — to the Essenes, to the disciples, to Jesus himself.

They're with you now.

Every time you pray, you're tapping into the same divine frequency they accessed.

The same power. The same connection. The same miracles.

This is your inheritance. This is your birthright. And it's finally, fully yours.

I don't know what specific blessings are making their way to you right now.

I don't know if it's the money you've needed, the healing you've prayed for, the love you've longed for, or something you haven't even dared to dream of yet.

But I know this:

Something is coming. Something is shifting.

Something is already different — right now, in this very moment — because you made the decision to be here.

Because you read these words. Because you opened your heart to a new way.

The seeds have been planted. The prayer has been heard.

And the blessings? They're already on their way.

Welcome to your new life. Welcome to answered prayers. Welcome to the peace, the abundance, the healing, and the love that were always meant to be yours.

You're not hoping anymore. You're not waiting anymore.

You're receiving.

Starting now. Starting today. Starting with the very next breath you take.

This is your moment. This is your miracle. This is your beginning.

Go. Pray. And step into the blessed life that's been waiting for you all along.

L'alam… Al-mein… Amen.
